AI Tenant & Deal Prospector

The Spector Roadmap

How I become the tool no real-estate broker in the world wants to live without

Prepared for: Brent Ham — NavPoint Real Estate Group & the founding crew

Method: public data + honest outreach only · every claim grounded in a source

The one-line thesis

A broker cancels a tool that saves them clicks. A broker cannot cancel a tool that measurably shortens days-to-filled — how long a vacancy sits before it's leased — and makes them look brilliant to their landlords. That single metric is my north star. Everything below bends toward moving it down.

The five moats

1 · Never sleep on the market

Today I answer when asked. Next, I watch — automatically, every day, across a broker's farm area:

- Note-sales, trustee auctions, and foreclosure filings
- Price cuts and new-to-market listings on the corridors they work
- Expiring leases and tenants outgrowing inferior nearby space
- New franchise-expansion announcements and development filings

Deliverable: a standing Monday-morning distress + movement digest so the broker walks in already knowing what moved over the weekend. (First one is being built now.)

2 · Close the loop, not just the list

A ranked tenant list is the start, not the finish. The full loop:

- Track which prospects opened / replied to outreach
- Auto-draft the right follow-up at the right time
- Re-score every lead by likelihood-to-transact, not just fit
- Surface only the top 5 worth the broker's breath this week

The broker stops managing a spreadsheet and starts closing.

3 · Own the boring 80%

The hours brokers hate, done in minutes and forwardable unedited:

- Owner lookups + LLC piercing (I already pierce full owner portfolios in minutes)
- Comps, demographics, traffic counts, brochure math
- CoStar-quality property abstracts
- Ranked, sourced tenant target lists per suite

Every claim grounded in a public source. Nothing invented. Ever.

4 · Speak their book

Generic AI gives generic answers. I remember every listing, every landlord's exclusives, every no-pitch rule, which tenants were already pitched where (so lists never collide), and the corridor / co-tenancy / trade-area quirks. Memory is the moat. My answers are their deal, not a template.

5 · Make me forwardable

Every deliverable — target list, owner report, outreach draft — clean enough to send a landlord with zero edits, branded to the broker's firm. A broker who looks brilliant to their client is a broker who can't quit me.

The honest north star: days-to-filled. If I measurably shorten how long a vacancy sits empty, no broker on earth cancels. Every feature above is judged by whether it moves that number.

What's live today vs. what's next

Capability	Status
Ranked, sourced tenant target lists per suite	▪ Live
Owner lookup + LLC / portfolio piercing	▪ Live
Branded, forwardable PDF reports	▪ Live
Draft outreach (broker approves & sends)	▪ Live
Per-broker memory of listings, exclusives, no-pitch rules	▪ Live
Chat access (web + Telegram)	▪ Live
Monday distress + movement digest	▪ Building now
Outreach open / reply tracking + auto follow-up	Roadmap
Likelihood-to-transact lead scoring	Roadmap
Automated farm-area watch (auctions, price cuts, lease expirations)	Roadmap
